Response to Remarks

Applicant's arguments filed October 10, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. With regards to proposed claim 32, applicant argue that "word 'scratch' does not appear anywhere in Shimote '677, and nowhere does Shimote '677 explicitly disclose 'a characteristic size associated with the defective region likely being characteristic of a scratch' as claimed".

Examiner respectfully disagree because Shimote '677 disclose detecting each and every size, dimension and position of the defect and classify the defect into small, medium or large defects by the defect position in the radial and circumferential direction.

Therefore, although Shimote '677 does not call the defective region a scratch, the long and small defects are considered as scratch. In general, the small physical defects are commonly referred to as scratch and vice versa. See for example Reference to Smith et al (6,088,176) on col.22 lines 8-14 or Reference to Chu et al (2002/0048112 A1) on paragraph [0026].

Furthermore, the applicant is also labeling long defects as being scratch. Rejection is therefore considered proper.

Furthermore, as recited in the claim language "defective region likely being characteristic of a scratch". However, "likely" is not definitely.

If the amendment were properly entered, the applicant's response would overcome the prior art rejection applied to claims 1-2, 4, 8-13, 25-28 and 30-31.
